Federal News

- On Tuesday, NIAID Director Dr. Anthony Fauci said that the U.S. is “not in total control” of the coronavirus pandemic and daily new cases could surpass 100,000 new infections per day if the outbreak continues on its current trend. Dr. Fauci’s comments were made during a hearing by the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions (HELP) Committee. (CNBC)
- On Monday, Dr. Ann Schuchat, the principal deputy director of the Centers for Disease Control said the coronavirus is spreading too rapidly and too broadly for the U.S. to bring it under control. (CNBC)
- On Monday, the American Academy of Pediatrics made a statement that "strongly advocates that all policy considerations for the coming school year should start with a goal of having students physically present in school." (NPR)
- On Tuesday, the European Union (EU) announced that most travelers from the United States will be barred from entering the EU after it reopens its borders Wednesday because the coronavirus is still far too prevalent in the U.S. (NBC)
- Scientists are trying to understand a mutation of the novel coronavirus seen around the globe that some believe could make the virus more contagious. The mutation, officially designated D614G, or "G" for short, has been found to affect the virus' spike protein, which is a structure that allows it to enter human cells. The more effective the spike protein, the easier it can enter a host's body. (Washington Post)

Maryland Updates

- Gov. Larry Hogan has proposed a $1.45 billion cut in state spending for FY21 to mitigate the disastrous economic effects of the coronavirus. The proposed cuts include state employees’ raises, vacant positions, and funding for programs ranging from school security to prosecuting violent crime in Baltimore. Maryland Comptroller Peter Franchot plans to reject more than $205 million of the proposed budget cuts, including elimination of a cost-of-living increase for state employees and reductions in the state’s contributions to workers’ health insurance and retirement plans. (Baltimore Sun)
- On Tuesday, Governor Larry Hogan announced $190 million in relief to help colleges, small businesses, and nonprofit organizations affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. In total, over the last week, the governor has announced $475 million in new investments through the federal CARES Act. (Office of Gov Larry Hogan)
- On Sunday, Governor Larry Hogan and State Superintendent Karen Salmon announced $210 million in additional funding to help Maryland schools and students most affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. This funding, allocated through the federal CARES Act, will be used to ensure that more students have access to remote learning, and expand targeted tutoring initiatives for at-risk students.
